Proposals and References

Proposal No. 1: Appropriation of Surplus

The Company hereby proposes to appropriate the surplus as described below.

1. Matters Regarding Fiscal Year-end Dividend

The Company places the highest priority on distribution of results through dividends as a measure of returning profits to shareholders. Our basic dividend strategy outlines steadily increasing dividends through continuous growth in earnings per share by enhancing and strengthening its corporate earning capacity based on a long-term perspective. Furthermore, its policy is to achieve the stable increase of dividends, with dividend payout ratio of around 30% of profit attributable to owners of parent.

On the other hand, to maintain its competitiveness based on advanced technical capabilities as the leading company in photonics, the Company believes long-term investment will be essential for the research and development necessary to achieve long-term growth of our corporate value and creation of the photon-based industries. To accomplish this, the Company also recognizes the importance of ensuring a certain level of funds on hand to provide for research and development investment and for capital investment. In addition, while the Company also regards funds on hand as a bulwark against earthquakes and other natural disasters and maintains a high level of retained earnings, it recognizes such funds contribute to the further enhancement of corporate value through business investment for the development of highly competitive future products.

Based on the above policy and a comprehensive review of various factors including its financial results, the Company proposes a year-end dividend of 28 yen per share. The amount of annual dividend will be 48 yen per share including an interim dividend of 20 yen we have already paid, which is 8 yen more than that for the previous fiscal year.

(1) Type of property for dividends:

Cash

(2) Allotment of property for dividends and total amount thereof:

28 yen per share of common stock of the Company for a total of 4,342,693,488 yen

(3) Effective date for distribution of dividends from surplus:

December 20, 2021

2. Other Matters Regarding Appropriation of Surplus

To reinforce its management base to prepare for business developments in the future while preparing for providing stable dividends to shareholders, the Company proposes to make an account transfer as follows.

(1) Item of surplus to be increased and amount thereof:

General reserve: 5,000,000,000 yen

Reserve for dividends: 2,500,000,000 yen

(2) Item of surplus to be decreased and amount thereof:

Retained earnings brought forward: 7,500,000,000 yen

The status of our research and development is reported below.

<Basic Research Sector>

In the industrial field, in the area of semiconductor laser (LD) excitation¹, the Company developed an industrial pulsed laser device that outputs the world's highest pulse energy of 250 joules². In this development, the Company found a way to boost the output by further amplifying the pulsed laser from the already developed high power laser system using a new amplifier. By improving the configuration of the laser medium³ in the amplifier and optimizing the structure of the amplifier, the amplification capacity of the laser has been improved. In addition, our original optical control technology enables us to achieve more precise focusing of the laser beam. Our aforementioned developments have allowed us to more than double the output of pulsed lasers while maintaining the same size as conventional equipment. As a result, the Company has realized the world's first 250 joule-class high output pulsed laser equipment. Going forward, we plan to use this developed product to expand the range of applications of this technology in the industrial field for applications such as achieving improvements in processing technologies to make harder metallic parts for aircraft and cars and improving fatigue strength.

In the optical materials sector, the Company has confirmed that using our metalens under development in combination with the Company's manufactured opto-semiconductor devices is an effective way to improve the performance of those devices. A metalens is a two-dimensional array of a periodical nanostructure with a period sufficiently smaller than the wavelength. Through the adjustment of the shape of the nanostructure, it is able to function as a thin lens, thereby offering the potential to enhance performance while reducing the size of light emitting/receiving devices. This time, we mounted the metalens on the top part of the device, which led to approximately 10% improvement in photosensitivity, demonstrating that the metalens can increase device performance. In the future, we will continue to aim for higher value-added and higher performance of the Company's products by using metalenses, which are compatible with semiconductor technology and can be mass-produced at low cost, and promote applications for various purposes including MPPC for LiDAR.^{4,5}

In the medical care field, we are working to improve imaging technology in nuclear medicine testing applications such as PET. In the field of nuclear medicine testing, in order to obtain high-definition diagnostic images, it is necessary for the detector to accurately capture the position of the radiation emitted from the patient's body. However due to the characteristics of current detectors, the image is corrected by a process called image reconstruction. In this development, the Company used a high temporal performance radiation detector that captures radiation more accurately and artificial intelligence to use imaging phantoms⁶ to test for detection and succeeded in being the first in the world to acquire an image without image reconstruction⁷. This achievement is expected to enable the acquisition of high-definition images in real time in the field of nuclear medicine testing and to reduce the physical burden on patients by using imaging methods that require a smaller radiation dose.

1 Semiconductor laser (LD) excitation refers to when the atoms and molecules of a laser medium are put in a state of high energy by using semiconductor lasers.

2 This product was developed as part of the "Research and Development of Next Generation Laser Processing Technology" project by the New Energy and Industrial Technology Development Organization (NEDO).

3 A laser medium is a material that stores energy from an outside source and amplifies the laser passing through it by imparting that energy to it.

4 LiDAR is one kind of remote sensing technology that measures distance by irradiating a laser beam onto an object and capturing the reflected light with an optical sensor. This technology is attracting attention for such applications such as self-driving technology in automobiles.

5 MPPC is a high-performance opto-semiconductor device that has high multiplication capability and can detect weak light at the photon counting level. MPPC devices are under demand for LiDAR applications due to their excellent photosensitivity in the near-infrared wavelengths.

6 Imaging phantoms are irradiation distribution models modeled on human forms, which are used in experiments to evaluate the imaging technology of nuclear medicine testing machines.

7 This is the results of collaboration with the University of California, Davis, the University of Fukui, and Kitasato University.

<Development Sector>

Development of large-diameter photomultiplier tubes to be used for “Hyper-Kamiokande,” the next generation of neutrino measurement experiments

The Company has developed a large-diameter photomultiplier tube to function as a photosensor for “Hyper-Kamiokande,” the next-generation of neutrino measurement experiments, which are scheduled to start operation in 2027. This experiment will be the successor experiment to the Kamiokande and the Super-Kamiokande experiments, which led to winning the Nobel Prize for Physics. It is expected that this experiment will lead to better understanding of the origin of the universe and life by measuring the very weak Cherenkov light generated by reactions caused by neutrinos in pure water, which is contained a giant water tank, and studying those properties. The Company has developed the photomultipliers used for the measurement of neutrinos. Now we are being asked to develop photosensors with even higher performance for the Hyper-Kamiokande. In response, we have not only roughly doubled the photosensitivity and measurement precision of light compared with the photomultipliers used for the Super-Kamiokande experiment by revising the structure of photoemissive surface and electrode, but we have also newly developed photomultipliers that keep the inherent noise of detection equipment to a minimum. The Company will continue to contribute to the advancement of elementary particle physics through developing high-performance photosensors.

Development of new profile sensors with inbuilt computational functioning to enable high-speed position detection

A profile sensor is a kind of image sensor that is specifically designed to detect the position of objects. Compared with regular image sensors, one defining characteristic is that they are able to acquire the necessary information rapidly due to the smallness of the signal data. They are used in such devices as measurement instruments that measure the distance, etc. from objects. Up until now, the Company has developed profile sensors for measurement instruments, but it was necessary to connect up external control devices to perform computational processing to output the acquired signal data as coordinate data required for measurement. With this new development, the Company has revised the circuit architecture to have the circuit for performing the computational processing built into the profile sensor, making the profile sensor capable of outputting coordinate data without using a control device. By using this product, it will be possible to make measurement instruments smaller and lighter, and also cheaper. In addition, the speed at which signal data can be acquired will be improved, and by adding functions that assist in position detection of moving objects, it is expected that in the area of factory automation, its potential applications will further expand.

Development of ORCA-Quest, an ultra low-noise CMOS digital camera for scientific measurements

In the area of scientific measurement, low-noise cameras are required to measure very weak light. In this development, the Company has developed a two-dimensional CMOS image sensor that is capable of taking images at high speeds with the world’s lowest noise and highest detail by using original design technology and the latest manufacturing technology. This has resulted in the development of ORCA-Quest, a new camera that is designed to make maximum use of those performance characteristics. This is the world’s first camera that is capable of measuring photons, the smallest unit of light, accurately on two-dimensional space, and turning that data into an image. We expect that due to its ability to correctly observe quantum states and take images of ultra-weak light in a wide range of fields, this product will find application in not only in the field of quantum information, such as quantum computing, but also in the areas of astronomy, life science, etc.

As reported above, we are using the proprietary photonics technologies our Group has cultivated over many years to pursue basic research aimed at the creation of new knowledge and new industries and undertake development that seeks to create new products and further enhance the high performance and added value of existing products in sectors such as biotechnology, medical care, information, telecommunications, energy, materials, space and astronomy and agriculture.

For the fiscal year ended September 30, 2021, research and development expenses decreased to JPY 11,367 million (down by 6.4%) compared with the previous fiscal year.

(2) Capital Investment

For the fiscal year ended September 30, 2021, we made total capital investments of JPY 12,982 million for purposes such as expanding production capacity. The amounts of capital investment by business segment are as follows:

(Millions of Japanese Yen)
Segment	The amounts of capital investment
Electron tube	6,839
Opto-semiconductor	3,079
Imaging and measurement instruments	1,266
Other	1,797
Total	12,982

(3) Fund Procurement

There was no fund procurement during the fiscal year ended September 30, 2021.

(4) Issues to be Addressed

With regard to the business environment surrounding the Group, the effect from COVID-19 has become protracted, and companies are continuing to face harsh conditions. However, some aspects are showing signs of improvement, as seen by the growing global demand for semiconductors, etc. Operating under such conditions, the Company's operating results, which had fallen into a lull in the previous fiscal year due to the COVID-19-caused stagnation of business, benefited not only from a return to pre-COVID-19 demand in many fields from the first half of the current fiscal year, but also the continuation of product demand for use in medical devices used for diagnosing COVID-19 cases, and a recovery in market conditions associated with the growth in global semiconductor demand for 5G and data centers, etc. As a result, the Group achieved record-high operating results for the current fiscal year.

On the other hand, although the roll-out of vaccines is progressing and this is expected to have an effect on COVID-19 infections, it is still difficult to predict when we can call an end to its influence. In addition, the global semiconductor shortage has had a serious impact on manufacturers' production activities, and going forward, we recognize that there will continue to be a degree of uncertainty. Notwithstanding the aforementioned uncertainties regarding the outlook, the Company's products are serving society through their use in various settings such as medical care, industry and analysis, and they are what we call key enabling technology, which is technology that is crucial for improving the performance of our customers' end products. Therefore, going forward, we believe that demand for our products will remain solid. So that we can continue in the future to flexibly respond to the ever-changing needs of society, we will actively pursue the capital investment necessary for tomorrow and make the investment to research and development to improve our core technologies such as our photosensors, which carry our business forward.

The Company is also pushing ahead with measures to strengthen the existing governance structure. In the current fiscal year, in addition to introducing an Executive Officer system and improving the expediency of decision-making and strengthening the supervisory function of the Board of Directors, the Company introduced a Nomination and Compensation Committee as a non-mandatory entity. Moreover, we believe the Group's products are essential for a sustainable society. While appropriately addressing the various issues pertaining to the environment and social problems, etc., which are changing with the times, we will aim to further advance as a global company. On the road ahead, we will uphold our venture spirit and strive to enhance corporate value by creating new industry while working together with our customers around the world.

We look forward to continuing to receive your unwavering support and encouragement in the future.

c. Matters including policy for determining the content of Directors' remuneration and others

The Company has adopted a resolution on the policy for determining the content of individual remuneration, etc. for Directors and other matters at a Board of Directors meeting. Furthermore, the Board of Directors meeting has judged that the method of determining the details of remuneration, etc. and the content of determined remuneration. are consistent with the determination policy resolved by the Board of Directors meeting, and accordingly, that the remuneration, etc. for each individual Director in the fiscal year ended September 30, 2021, is in line with said determination policy. The policy for determining the content of remuneration, etc. for individual Directors is as follows.

The Company pursues the unknown where no one has yet explored. By leveraging photonics technology to establish new industries and reach for the world's highest levels of manufacturing excellence, we build enterprise value and contribute to the development of science and technology. However, only a small fraction of the nature of light has been elucidated. We explore fields not yet explained. Based on the knowledge generated by that inquiry, we require our Directors and employees to seek potential applications. Based on this idea, the Company requires Directors to pursue outcomes from a medium to long-term rather than a short-term perspective. Therefore, the Company considers that fixed remuneration is most suitable as the base remuneration for Directors.

On the other hand, as Directors are obligated to fulfill their commitments to our shareholders, aiming to contribute to continuous improvement in corporate value from the same position as our shareholders by promoting the long-term, stable holding of the Company's stock by Directors, in January 2020 we introduced stock-based remuneration (restricted stock-based remuneration).

As a result, remuneration for Directors of the Company (excluding Outside Directors) is composed of fixed remuneration and stock-based remuneration. Regarding the amount of Director remuneration, fixed monthly remuneration established based on position is decided at the Board of Directors meetings and paid monthly. Furthermore, stock-based remuneration set at around 15% of total Director remuneration is decided for each Director at the Board of Directors meetings and paid prior with a 30-year transfer restriction period from the record date. Additionally, only fixed remuneration is paid as remuneration for Outside Directors.
